Warrants Against Phoenix.

Furty-two warrants Tagainst the hoenix Hotel Company, of Lexington, charging a violation of the State law by having quail in possession for sale were served on John McClintock, presdent of the company. The warrants were sworn out before County Judge Scott by J. Quincy Ward, executive agent of the Game and Fish Commission of the State of Kentucky. Mr. Ward, accompanied by Charles E. Brewster, United States Government game expert of Washington, was in Lexington Saturday afternoon. Judge Scott has set the cases for trial for March 20.

The company was recently fined $5 on thirty counts for a similar violation.

The board of regents of the : Kertucky Normal School met at Frankfort Tuesday. President J. G. Crabbe stated that while the failure to secure interest-bearing warrants for the 1912 appropriation for the school leaves it without money except the small amount necessary to pay day laborers, the school will not close down. Provision dealers, he said, are willing to wait for their pay for dormitory supplies, and the teachers are making the best of the situation.

MYSTERY IN A POCKET HAD CORNER IN KISSES

Usher one day not long ago shouted upstairs to Mrs. Usher that he found his watch was slow and that she had just five minutes to make the train to

"Gracious!" wailed Mrs. Usher back at him, "I never can-there's a thin spot in the heel of my stocking right above the edge of my low shoes and it'll rub into a hole in no time. It's silk-"

"Take along another pair!" ordered Usher, gruffly. "You can change out there and there won't be a soul around and it's such a bully day-oh, come along!"

Thereupon Mrs. Usher came along, frantically struggling into a heavy coat and stuffing hosiery and handkerchiefs into her husband's pockets. "There!" she said, triumphantly, when they had played nine holes,

"Look at my stocking!" An unmistakable hole showed above the line of her low shoe. "What did I tell you?"

else has been shut up for the winter." Mrs. Usher found the coat. There were two others next it. Only a few hardy persons were playing golf in the nipping air. After a while she reappeared bearing in her hands a crumpled ball of brown silk, the discarded hosiery. Just as she reached her hand toward the overcoat pocket Usher

"Yes," she answered, "I'm coming!" and hastily rammed home the hosiery. Let it be said at this point that Usher's coat hung very close to the next glass, one. The next one belonged to Ben-called from the hall.

That evening as Benning settled himself comfortably with the evening paper there was a little choking sound by a tablespoonful of lemon juice in a in the hall and presently Mrs. Benning stood before him tragically holding out something brown.

"Huh?" asked Benning, peering at the brown thing. "What, may I ask," demanded his wife, "are you doing with brown silk Kindly answer me that!" She shook out the hosiery to its full and incriminating length.

"Don't look so idiotic!" she cried when she could stand the strain no

"Why-why," stammered Benning, 'I don't know a th-thing about them.' Whereupon Mrs. Benning went into hysterics and cried that Benning never had loved her anyway and what had she ever done that such an awful thing should blight her life?

"Darling," cried the frantic Benning, "let me explain!"

"Then explain!" blazed his wife. "Good Lord!" greaned Benning, after a wild instant: "I can't! I-" "I shall go home to mother," an nounced Mrs. Benning. "I shall tell the janitor to bring up my trunks."

The rest of that night Mrs. Benning held her outraged head very high while carrying things from the closets and bureau drawers to trunks, Benning alternately tagging after her, piteously expostulating, or sunk in the biggest armchair in an attitude expressive of complete weariness with the world

"I know it sounds foolish," he moaned, "to say I don't know how the confounded things got there, but-" "It certainly does!" Mrs. Benning assured him, frostily. "I at least gave you credit for more imagination." It was just after Mrs. Benning had telephoned for a taxi in the morning that the phone rang and Benning stumbled to it.

"Hello!" said Usher's voice. "Say, have you by any chance got my wife's brown silk stockings in your overcoat pocket-"

"Here! Hurry!" yelled Benning, beckoning frantically to Mrs. Benning. "Come and listen to this!"

"I don't care!" said Mrs. Benning some moments later, when the crying and forgiving were over. "I never did like that Mrs. Usher, anyhow! And now, Arthur Benning, you can just set to work and help me unpack."-Chicago Daily News.

BY EDNA MAHLER.

Jane knew she was the ugly duckling of the family, and although her frocks were just as pretty and her hair ribbons of the lovely tints worn by her sisters, she did not command admiration.

Jane's hair was wiry, and although her mother "put it up" in curlers each night, the refractory tresses refused to form a ringleted halo about the little face. Elsie and Ruth had lovely curls which never "came out" when it rained; but Jane's did.

She longed to be pink and white and pretty, like her sisters, and each morning rubbed her little brown face so hard with the soapy cloth that frequently cold cream had to be applied to soothe the burning skin. Jane's feet and hands were large, and her skirts and sleeves too short to be of any use in concealing them. Realizing all these facts. Jane was shy. She hated parties and entertainments, where she had to sit alone against the "You can change when we go in for wall and strive to look at ease, while luncheon," said Usher. "I left my the other girls had the best kind of a coat hanging up in that little hall just time. outside the lunchroom-everything

When the invitation came from Ethel Simpson's mother, asking the sisters to a "fancy dress" party New Year's eve, Jane resolved to remain at home. Her mother, not understanding the reason for her little daughter's sudden dislike for parties, immediately started the costumes, and a day before the event the costumes were completed and tried on.

Elsie looked like a Dresden china 'Bo-Peep," and Ruth was an equally dainty "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," but Jane did not need to ask of her

"Mirror, mirror on the wall, Who's the fairest one of all?"

One glance told her the painful truth. She was all wrong as "Little Miss Muffet." The fluffy white cap with its blue bow called for soft, golden curls. The lovely frock of rosesprigged dimity needed a plump neck and a rounded pair of arms and legs. Why hadn't her mother provided a "Red Riding Hood" cloak, which ex-tended to the floor? She could have wrapped herself up in this like a worm in its chrysalis.

Her mother was satisfied. She saw only the pretty costume, and knew that her "work was good."

Poor Jane! That party hung like the sword of Damocles over her head, and she wished that the box of chocolates she ate that day would make her so ill she could not go. The next morning her head ached, and Jane grew more cheerful. Perhaps she would have a bilious attack, and Doctor Myers would prescribe calomel. That, she knew, would make her dreadfully ill. After breakfast and a morning spent building a snow fort, the headache had totally disappeared, and with it Jane's hopes for a few days in bed.

Her mother proudly dressed each one of her ducklings and sent them off to the party with a kiss and a wish for a "happy time." Jane's rather wistful countenance lingered with her for a moment, and she wondered why the child had become so strange.

The Simpson home was aglow with life, and as they entered the doorway the sounds of merriment issuing from the parlor made Jane long to escape. She followed the others upstairs to shed their wraps, like an automaton, and when Mrs. Simpson ushered them stockings in your coat pocket, Arthur? into the room she sought the loneliest corner and settled herself for the eve-

Ethel Simpson suggested that they numbered the girls. The number falling to Jane's lot was four.

Then the fun began. Ethel, Ruth for their kisses as the nice boys called their numbers

Jane's number had never been from her chair and rushed to catch the pan, she deplored her homeliness, relative.

Then Teddy Brooks, the "red-head" boy in the crowd, called "Number the pan, and catching it, blushingly cipal." held up her face for Teddy's kiss. Then she spun the pan, and without thought and weakly said "Number nine." Teddy, grinning with pleasure, caught the pan, and when Jane was Jane realized he had not avoided her number as the other boys always did, and gleefully called "Number vested as it is!" nine" again. Then Teddy yelled "four" and Jane followed with "nine," and thus they cornered the kisses until wild protests from the other guests brought Mrs. Simpson to the scene, a number of newly acquired bits of and being a tactful woman, she suggested another game.

Teddy escorted Jane to supper and as they sair "good-night" a knowing twinkle gleamed in each pair of eyes.

When the "ugly duckling" awoke the next morning the New Year was greeted with a heart full of gladness, for with its coming she had discovered a friend who considered her a

St. Peter looked troubled. "I've only room for one just now." he said. "It'll go to the better of you

Jane looked pityingly at Mary. "I," she said, "have been a successful speaker for my cause. I have stirred women up till they got the vote. Owing to their having the vote they have accomplished the passing of certain bills. These bills have benefited some two thousand human beings. "I'm afraid I can't," sighed the mother. "I never did a thing except bring up my seven boys. They turned out well, but-that only makes seven human beings I've benefited."

She turned meekly away. "Hold on," said St. Peter. She turned back. "What about those sons? What have they done for their

New "Missing Link."

An important find of human remains has been made in Sussex England. It is part of a skull and jawbone, and will come to be known as the "Piltdown" skull. So far, it is believed possible, the remains belong to that immensely remote period when the North Sea was dry and the mastodon roamed the land; in short, to the Pliocene era. The skull is extraordinarily thick, nearly one-half of an inch. It has a good straight forehead, and undoubtedly had brain. The jaw seems to indicate, however, that there was no power of speech. There are merely two well worn molar teeth in place, but other things show that in life there were great canines and large front teeth. In this it differs from the famous Heidelberg skull, which is also apelike in form but hman as to teeth. It was found with mastodon and Pliocene elephant bones, and primitive flints; but these, Sir Ray Lankester considers, may or may not have been coeval. The skull is being restored. It seems to link man to a new species and confirm his near relation to the ape. The find was made by an amateur geologist, Charles Dawson, F.

THE SPRING MAID.

"The Spring Maid," the attraction at the Paris Grand tonight, is a mu-sical comedy at its [best. The : music s musicianly and of the haunting nature that makes an appeal to all classes. The comedy is irresistible and the whole piece is characterized by a brightness and a freshness and a spirit that pervades the playhouse the instant the curtain rises on the first lively scene of the Carlsbad Spring

Here is a case of a widely exploited musical piece living up to its reputation. A pleasant surprise, surely, and those who enjoy amusement of the flowers early. I represent the best highest class cannot afford to miss this joyous little operetta.

The music is most tuneful of all recent importations and critics all over the country have declared it more pleasing than that of its Vienese sisters "The Merry Widow" and "The Chocolate Soldier." In the present production of "The Spring Maid" will be seen the famous original "Spring Maid" chorus and ballet, a group of young women who hae achieved almost as much fame as the principals themselves for their remarkable good looks and ability to sing and dance.

HARRY LAUDER.

The season's event in Lexicgton will be the first appearance of Harry Lauder, the famous Scotch comedian, who will be seen at the Lexington Opera House for a special matinee and a night performance on Friday, March 21, together with his High-lander's Bagpipe Band, his big symphony orchestra and his company of international celebrities of the European capitals.

Lauder is now making his first journey through the South, and is taking on the atmosphere of the conquering progress of a royal potentate rather than of a stage star, even a stage idol such as this wonderful Scottish genius, who is the highest paid entertainer of all the history of the stage anywhere. In Lexington he is to be greeted and feted, and lionized at public receptions by Mayor Cassidy and the prominent Scots and officials

This is Lauder's fifth tour of Amerca, and in this period he -has established records everywhere for attendance and popularity. He is the most imitated performer in stage annals. His phonograph records have sold into the mill one in America. England and every toreign nation, and he had the credit for outselling Caruso something like twenty to one in these popular mediums of home entertainment.

Mail orders are now being filled by Manager Chas. Scott, of the Lexington Opera House, and the demand is as heavy as might be expected for a star of such magnitude: The prices will be 50 to $1.50 at matinee, and 50 cents to $2 at the night performance.

J. Will Clay Announces for Sen-

In this issue of the News appears the cratic nomination as Senator of the Twenty-Eighth Senatorial District composed of the counties of Bourbon,

Clark and Montgomery. Under the rotation agreement which has long been observed in this district it is Montgomery'st ime to furnish the nominee and it is most likely neither Bourbon nor Clark wll put a canddate in opposition to Montgomery's claim. Mr. Clay is a native of Bourbon county, removing from this county to Montgomery at the age of six. He is prominently connected, being a descendant of the late Dr. John Clay, and is a brother of Hon. M. C. Clay. now Insurance Commissioner of Kentucky. There is not a more deserving Democrat in Montgomery county than Mr. Clay, and he is thoroughly equipped for the high honor which he seeks. He is an active and progressive farmer, a shrewd business man, and understands to a marked degree the needs of the district. He has served two terms in the Legislature as representative from Montgomery county, with great credit and general satisfaction to the people of his home county.

The ideal carriage horse is the American trotting bred horse, with size, speed, courage, and the true trotting gait, with plenty of knee and hock action. In addition he must have a clean cut head and neck, style and finish, plenty of substance without coarseness.

Recognizing the demand for this class of horses, I selected Taylor Simmons 23489, a young horse which fills all the requirements of the typical carriage horse. If the theory that "like begets like" be true, he will produce horses of this type when mated with good mares. Through his veins flow the blood of the greatest trotting families. He traces twice to George Wilkes and five times to Mambrino Chief II. This is backed by the stout thoroughbred blood of Boston.

A few of the fancy priced ones sired by Taylor Simmons: Thendara, winner in the walk-trot class at the Blue Grass Fair in 1907, Louisville Horse Show and in the East, sold by Col. C. L. LITTLE MEXICAN TOWN OF MAZA-PIL IS SAID TO BE PAVED.

Discovery Made by American Mining Engineer Results in the Purchase by Company of All the Property They Could Buy.

If Dick Whittington had only lived today he might have found the city whose streets were paved with gold. For recent investigation has brought to light the fact that such a place does exist, and that there is marvelous wealth in the little Mexican town of Mazapil.

Imagine the bricks of the pavement being full of gold and estimated from $500 to $600 to the ton! And there is a single wall about a garden in front of the town hall which is valued

SCIENTIFIC MEN SUCCEED IN PRO-DUCING FIERCE HEAT.

Granulated Aluminum Mixed With Oxide of Iron Resulted in a Temperature of 3,000 Degrees Centigrade, the Record.

For some years past scientific men have been striving to produce heat fiercer than any temperature of which we have experience in ordinary life. The greatest heat ever developed by the agency of man was obtained by Sir Andrew Noble, who exploded cordite in closed vessels, so that a pressure of 50 tons to the square inch was registered and a degree of heat never previously recorded.

in fuel furnaces for practical purposes is between 1,700 and 1,800 degrees centigrade, and at such a heat fire clay and porcelain are melted. Then we come to the flame fed with and coal gas; by these means a temperature of 2,000 degrees centigrade may be obtained.

UNCLE SAM OPPOSES TIPS

Will Not Pay Bill of $80.45 Spent by Officer on Visit to Germany.

New York.-Capt. Matthew E. Hanna, U. S. A., who recently resigned from the army to enter business in this city, has discovered that the government does not believe in tips. Captain Hanna, as a member of the general staff, witnessed the German army maneuvers as guest of the emperor in 1911, and on his visit spent $80.45 in tips to waiters and hotel servants.

It was said that the total bill of $319 which he turned in was only half of what it cost him to maintain his part of the dignity of the United States representative during his visit, and in this he had included the tipping item.

After considerable correspondence the treasury department has finally ruled that Captain Hanna must stand lice, but they have failed to get the TWIN the tipping expense himself.

Why Snow Is Warm.

Snow is warm by virtue of its light and woolly texture. But it is also warm on account of its whiteness. Had snow been black it would have absorbed the heat of the sun and melted quickly. Instead, it reflects heat, and the reflected heat falls upon bodies above the snow, while the warmth of the earth is preserved beneath it.

MAIL FAST: BLOCKS SUICIDE

Friends, Informed by Letters, Halt West Norristown (Pa.) Man's Death Plans.

Norristown, Pa.-The United States mail was too fast for Robert Mulfinger, sixty-five years old, a wealthy business man of West Norristown township, and to this be owes the fact that he is alive. Mulfinger planned to commit suicide and he wrote letters to a gaged in saving the rare species that lighted by a deep spiritual vision. Llocal undertaker and a local banker is being massacred for their aigrette The hat of the pilgrim lies on a rude | about his burial and his last wishes. They received the letters so promptly that they found Mulfinger lying in his bathroom with a tube connected with the gas fixture in his mouth. He was revived and demanded to know why they had saved his life.

Mulfinger lost money recently in investments and he got the idea that he was going to the poorhouse. He preferred death to that fate.

Ask Order Restraining Postmaster General

Counsel for the New York Journal Cypewriters Counsel for the New York Journal applied to the Supreme Court to restrain Postmaster General Burleson from immediately enforcing the Rebuilt Like New! 'newspaper publicity law," Former Postmaster General Hitchcock had agreed not to attempt to enforce the law pending a prompt appeal to the Supreme Court from the decision of ne Federal Courts in New York.

Rober G. Morris, counsel for the Journal of Commerc in a statement to the Supreme Court declared that on March 4 the postmaster of New York had notified the paper that unless the statements required by the law were filed at once, he would proceed to en-force its penalties. Similar letters, the attorney charged, had been sent to other newspapers throughout the country. Since March 4, Attorney Morris declared Postmaster General Burleson had informed him formally that unless the required returns were made on or before March 11, he would enforce the penalties which include disbarment rom the mails. The Supreme Court has had the validity of the law under consideration for several months, but has announced no decision. The court took the motion of Mr. Morris under advisement.
